Minutes of Gold

Two or three minutes - two or three hours,
What is their meaning in this life of ours?
Not very much if but counted as time,
But minutes of gold and hours sublime,
If only we'd use them once in awhile
To make someone happy— to make someone smile.
A minute may dry a lonely one's tears,
An hour may sweep away trouble of years.
Minutes of my time may bring to an end
Hopelessness somewhere and love to a friend.

The Healing of Kelly Wilkinson Through Padre Pio's Intercession

As told by Ann Wilkinson, County Louth, Ireland

“On December 5, 1976, my second child, Kelly was born in the Mater Hospital in Belfast. She was delivered by cesarean section because it was discovered before her birth, that her heart was beating very rapidly and that she was very distressed.

While I was still under the anesthetic, I remember a nurse telling me that the little girl I had just given birth to was very ill. They needed her name, because they were going to baptize her.

Kelly had been born with a congenital heart defect which also caused her to have a grossly enlarged liver. She wasn't expected to live through the night.

I lay in bed in the hospital and prayed that this little girl would live. I always had a great devotion to Our Lady and I said my rosary that night as if I was sending a message with no room for error.

I thought about all the babies that had been aborted or given up for adoption. I knew that at birth, Kelly had been very blue and didn't breathe for a few moments. It was suspected that she might have brain damage as well. In my prayer I told Our Lady that I didn't care whether my little girl was deformed, handicapped mentally or physically I wanted her and I'd accept her however the good Lord would give her to me.

The next morning, Dr. Muriel Fraser told me plainly Kelly wasn't going to live. They had discovered her heart had not developed properly. Instead of the normal two ventricles, there was only one. The older Kelly got, the greater strain it would be on her inadequate heart. Inevitably, death would come from a massive heart attack. If they could get her stabilized, Kelly might have a future but only for a short time. We had to try and accept that she wasn't going to be part of our family for very long.

My husband Jim went to see Kelly in the special pediatric intensive care unit of the hospital. He remembers looking at all the little babies in incubators, some of them deformed and some of them who really didn't look as if they had much life left. Then he came to our baby. He told me later that our baby looked so perfect in every way that he said to the doctor how terrible it was for all the other babies that were in the ward—they looked so ill, as if they weren't going to survive long. The doctor replied that the other children had between a thirty to fifty percent chance at life but our baby had not even a one percent chance of survival. There was, the doctor said, absolutely nothing anyone could do for her.

My mother handed me a prayer for the intercession of Padre Pio and said, "Say the prayer to Padre Pio and leave it all in God's hands."

My mother told me a few words about Padre Pio's life. She said that he was such a holy man that he could look into your soul and tell you what sort of person you were. Instantly, I took a dislike to him. I smile thinking about it now but I felt, "Well, if he looks into my soul, there's no way he's going to give me the miracle I need." Sinner that I knew I was, I decided then and there that Padre Pio wasn't for me.

For at least the first nine months of Kelly's life, she couldn't lie back. She had to sit up in a chair or her breathing became quite erratic. Kelly seemed to sleep all the time, got tired very, very easily, distressed very, very easily. At the least exertion whatsoever, her lips would turn blue.

My mother said a novena prayer every day to Padre Pio. I still couldn't find it in my heart to turn to him. I didn't honestly believe I was a good enough person to get a miracle through him. I felt he had been such a good and holy person in his life that he would accept nothing less from anyone who wanted his intercession. How wrong I was!

Every month we took Kelly for her checkup and every month we were told the same thing. Her condition hadn't changed.

It was nearing Kelly's fourth birthday and she was very ill. The doctors wanted to do another heart catheterization. I think they felt things were becoming crucial. I was going to have to make a decision about having this test done, knowing any little trivial operation could kill her. But I had to give her any chance I could.

She was due to be admitted to the hospital the next Tuesday. On Friday, a woman I knew asked me if I had ever gotten Kelly blessed with the mitten of Padre Pio. She told me there was a lady in the Skerries who had a mitten of Padre Pio.

Considering my relationship with Padre Pio, I wasn't too sure about this, but my husband and I decided to go to the woman's house and get Kelly blessed.

The woman who had Padre Pio's mitten was named Kay Thornton. She was getting ready to go to San Giovanni Rotondo (where Padre Pio lived and is buried). Kelly was blessed with the mitten in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. I also asked Kay to have a Mass said for Kelly in San Giovanni. Kay gave me magazines and prayer leaflets on the life of Padre Pio which I rolled up and put in my handbag. As we were driving back home, Kelly fell asleep in the back of the car.

As she was still sleeping when we reached home, I picked her up and put her to bed. I went to bed myself, and for the first time I said a prayer asking the intercession of Padre Pio.

Barely had I finished my prayers when Kelly came into the bedroom and said there was an old man in her room. I told her she was only dreaming. "No, Mommy, there's an old man in my room. Come quickly so you can see."

I took her back to her room, where she pointed toward a corner and said, "Mommy, look! There he is!" I could see absolutely nothing, so I tried to explain to her that there wasn't anyone there. "Don't be afraid," I said. "I'm not afraid, Mommy," she answered, "but he's there." "Look!" she insisted.

By this time I was getting a bit cross. I said, "No, Kelly. Come on, you have to go to bed now and go to sleep, because you're going to the hospital tomorrow."

But as I was tucking her in she was still insisting that there was an old man standing in the corner of her room. I went back to bed and wondered if she could be hallucinating. As I lay in bed I could hear her laughing and giggling in her room.

The next morning as we were getting ready for the trip to Belfast, I asked Kelly to get something from my handbag. When she opened my handbag she called, "Mommy, Daddy, come quickly!"

We ran into the living room and there Kelly was sitting with a magazine that Kay Thornton had given me which pictured Padre Pio on the front.

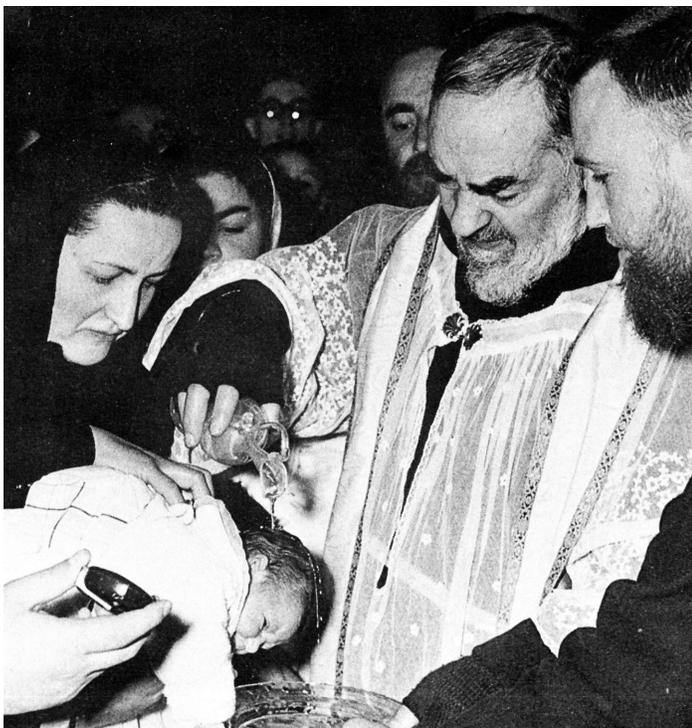

Kelly pointed to the picture and said, "Mommy, that's him. That's the man that was in my room last night!" I said, "No, Kelly, that's Padre Pio."

"But he's the man, Mommy, who was in my room last night," she insisted. She didn't say, "That's Padre Pio." To her it was just an old man. She had said the night before that he was an old man with a black coat. Now as I looked at the picture and saw the dark Capuchin habit, I had to accept the fact that it could have been Padre Pio that was in her room.

When we got to Belfast, I told my mother what had happened and she was delighted. She was fully convinced that Kelly was going to be all right.

Kelly was admitted to the hospital and had her catheterization. Afterward the cardiologist met with me to discuss Kelly's condition.

The cardiologist began: "Mrs. Wilkinson, I don't know how I'm going to explain this to you but I'll try. For the past four years you have been coming here religiously with your daughter and we haven't been able to give you any consolation or hope. And for that I'm very sorry. But I have in front of me Kelly's catheterization done at birth and it clearly shows she has a single ventricle, a congenital heart defect, and a grossly enlarged liver. And then I have here the catheterization done today. It shows absolutely no congenital heart defect. Kelly's heart today is perfectly normal.

Padre Pio Baptizes a Baby in His Hospital

The piece that wasn't there is now there. And the liver has reduced in size."

"Now last night we were keeping a close eye on Kelly because her heart seemed quite normal for the first time and her liver seemed to have reduced in size. I was quite baffled, especially when we did the catheterization, because they both look so different. My diagnosis today is that Kelly is a perfectly normal, healthy child. I can't explain it. There is no medical reason for it. Somehow you have obtained a miracle. So take Kelly home, because there's absolutely nothing wrong with her."

I burst into tears and babbled that I knew exactly what had happened, that I had been given a miracle, and the man through whom it came to me was Padre Pio.

Padre Pio's Words of Hope

"Do not anticipate the problems of this life with apprehension, but rather with a perfect hope that God to whom you belong, will free you from them accordingly. He has defended you up to now. Simply hold on tightly to the hand of His divine providence and He will help you in all events."

"If we only knew how God regards this sacrifice, we would risk our lives to be present at a single Mass."

"Hold on tightly to the Rosary. Be very grateful to the Madonna because it was she who gave us Jesus."

The best way of spending one's time is to spend it in furthering the salvation and sanctification of others."

"The little vessel which is your soul always possesses the strong anchor of trust in the Divine Goodness. This mystical vessel will always have Jesus as helmsman and Mary as its beacon. Hence there is no room for fear."

How to Become Padre Pio's Spiritual Child

Padre Pio said: "I love my spiritual children as much as my own soul and even more. I can assure you that when the Lord calls me, I will say to him: "Lord, I will stand at the gates of Heaven until I see that all of my spiritual children have entered."

Today many of Padre Pio's devotees still want to become his spiritual children.. Application should be made in writing to:

Padre Pio's Devotion to the Blessed Mother

Padre Pio always kept a picture of Our Lady Liberatrix on the wall of his cell. He used to look tenderly at it before taking his meals, before resting, and each time he entered his cell.

His love for Mary found expression in his ardent, uninterrupted prayer and in his constant repetition of the Rosary. Padre Pietro Tartaglia said: "I can see him today as he appeared to me when I was a youngster. It was beautiful to see him there in the silence of his cell when we Capuchin aspirants went to him for confession. The dim light gave a mystical touch to his emaciated but radiant countenance. Near him was a little statue of Our Lady and he spoke to us about her and taught us to love her. At a certain hour he used to walk in the friary garden, absorbed in his sufferings and his love while his rosary beads slipped through the fingers of his wounded hands. And how full and ardent was his voice when he recited the Angelus with the others.

A Message from our Spiritual Director:

Give Jesus

At Christmas time we receive many gifts and we give the same. For Blessed Padre Pio, his whole life was to give Jesus to others. But you cannot give what you do not have. Blessed Padre Pio, from the very beginning of his life, internalized Jesus so to become one with him. Since Jesus is infinite, Padre Pio could give Him to others through graces, favors, miracles, insights and love. The best photograph that exemplifies this giving, is the picture of Blessed Padre Pio holding the statue of Baby Jesus and giving Him to the people to kiss at Christmas, as is the European custom.

Blessed Padre Pio's words at Christmas are "May this Christmas Baby Jesus bring you great spiritual blessings and happiness. May He change you into Himself. May He fill you with the Holy Spirit and make you a saint. May His star shine in your soul. May His love set you on fire for God and make you rest in peace in the arms of His Divine Love."

So for this coming year, let us "sell" Jesus in many ways:

1. Radiate your love for God from your face, smile, and soul.
2. Talk about the great mercy of God.
3. Talk about the graces that many have received from Blessed Padre Pio.
4. Practice the great devotions of Blessed Padre Pio—the rosary, Mass, and confession.
